

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of updating a program in a terminal device is provided, wherein if a transmission of update data from a base station to a terminal device is interrupted due to any disconnection between them, then after it is verified that the terminal device becomes connected to the base station, the transmission process is re-started for remaining parts of the update data.

10